

Friedhelm's wing is a special part of Sukuna's estate that almost feels like a different world. It contains various buildings such as workshops, galleries, training stations, wood working, blacksmithing, and weaving. There is a gorgeous pond in the middle of it that the building surround and all face. Any building can be opened at the front to allow for unobstructed viewing of the pond. The paths are all worn stones transported from old riverbeds. The landscaping is lush with various flowers that bloom during all seasons. Trees are scattered throughout, mostly cherry blossom trees and Willow trees (yanagi), particularly weeping willows (shidare yanagi).

Friedhelm's rooms are all warm, decorated with sentimental pieces collected by Sukuna from his homeland in Bavarii. Friedhelm's art, and the art of his nephews and niece, adorn the walls and screens. Friedhelm's bedding is soft but grounded in earthen tones.

The buildings are all cypress wood painted red as this is Friedhelm signature color used in his paintings. Friedhelm often wears shades of green, white, and a shade called Himmelblau (sky blue associated with his Ten Brinken family/blood. He tans hides and many of them adorn the floors through his estate.

The most notable and interesting feature are the foxes. Friedhelm protects and rehabilitates foxes in his wing. They seek him out, often jumping into the estate and making their way to him. They are so devoted to Friedhelm that they do not fear Sukuna, and even tolerate him, because Friedhelm allows him into his wing.

Foxes are a motif of Friedhelm. He had two white shinigami foxes growing up. They are now Tsukihiko's shinigami but often visit and even stay with Friedhelm when Tsukihiko is at the estate.

Friedhelm's wing can be described as magical, otherworldly, luscious, romantic, and almost akin to a place where one would be surrounded by beautiful yokai. Perhaps, Friedhelm himself is a handsome fox demon?
